Chartered in 1972, NMSDC has established a national network of corporate members now numbering 1,450. That membership includes America’s top companies – publicly, privately and internationally owned – as well as universities, hospitals and other institutions with supply-chain needs.

To guarantee the essentials of a strong business relationship, NMSDC connects corporate members with qualified minority-owned suppliers of all sizes – Minority Business Enterprises (MBEs) – that meet a high standard of excellence.
Examine and investigate each MBE, verifying its viability, its practices and its capacity for growth.

Assist and enable MBEs in expanding their visions and their capabilities to meet the needs of corporate members.

Introduce and facilitate a mutually beneficial business relationship between MBEs and corporate members.

Promote and strengthen a universal understanding of the value of minority supplier development.

Four dynamic and enduring “action points” forge that standard:
As demographics in the U.S. continue to evolve, minorities will constitute more than 50% of the population by the year 2045. The cause of MBEs endures: their presence in American business represents a common interest in its future.

MBES generated more than $400 billion in economic output that resulted in the creation and/or preservation of 2.2 million jobs and also contributed $49 billion in revenue to local, state and federal tax authorities.

NMSDC is unwavering in its commitment to advancing the cause Asian, Black, Hispanic and Native American suppliers as critical partners in a globalized corporate supply chain.
Year in and year out, NMSDC assembles the most capable and dynamic network of certified MBEs in the world.

NMSDC’s certification process gives corporate buyers the confidence to build lasting relationships with trusted MBEs. NMSDC certification is the platinum standard in supplier diversity, verifying stability, recognizing promise and helping chart a profitable future for MBEs.

NMSDC connects 1,450 corporations (including 410 national corporate members and 1,030 local corporate members) to nearly 12,000 nationally-certified Asian, Black, Hispanic and Native American owned businesses.

A comprehensive schedule of NMSDC’s educational events includes conferences, workshops, seminars and programs delivered by academic partners. Qualified MBEs can access to capital to support growth and develop partnerships with fellow MBEs, in meeting the needs of its corporate members.

You can play a visionary role in a limitless American future. You can help shape the global supply diversity landscape, improve supply base relationships, and develop a more agile supply chain. That proactive involvement gives you investment in the coming new paradigm in American demographics—a majority-minority population by 2045, when the power and viability of MBEs will grow exponentially. Corporations benefit directly from minority supplier development programs. Their markets expand. The pool of qualified suppliers/contractors grows. Costs are reduced. Quality increases across products and services, with greater competition.

Minority communities benefit directly when corporations embrace minority supplier development programs. A direct correlation of these benefits emerges in communities where supplier business development and corporate economic development work together.

Simply put, it’s a good deal for everyone.

Corporate minority supplier development programs foster economic growth within the minority business community. They bring more minority entrepreneurs into the mainstream of the American economy.

Embracing cultural diversity and transformation will make corporations more responsive to their customers. They will meet the future with confidence, assurance and a commitment to working together that is uniquely American.

Corporations comfortable with cultural diversity and change, that are responsive to their customers, will thrive. Forward-looking corporations see minority supplier development as a value-added way of doing business and being good corporate citizens.
This macroeconomic principle can be a game-changer for the corporations. When MBEs participate in job creation, their communities have a greater stake in the economy.
The movement that evolved into NMSDC incubated in Chicago in the late 1960s, beginning with events that demonstrated the potential of minority supplier development – the Chicago Business Opportunity Day in 1967 and the Suppliers Opportunity Fair in 1968.

The following year, the Chicago Business Opportunity Fair achieved even more, attracting 600 representatives of minority-owned businesses who met with 200 representatives of large Chicago firms. Another critical development in 1969 was the creation the Minority Business Development Council (MBDA), established by President Richard M. Nixon.

NMSDC Founded as the National Minority Purchasing Council (NMPC)
A group of Chicago companies – led by Robert Stuart, president of National Can Company – organizes NMPC, which is incorporated the following year.

NMPC Goes National
NMPC publishes its first newsletter, with the establishment of 21 regional American purchasing councils. The same year, the Office of Minority Business Enterprise entered into a contract with NMSDC “to pursue the single objective of encouraging major corporations to adopt and implement programs to increase their purchases of goods and services from minority businesses.”

NMPC Holds Its First Membership Meeting
National members of NMPC approve the four-point criteria that will be ongoing basis for the organization’s work. The purchasing activity of NMPC, which began in 1972 at $86 million, reaches $3.1 billion.

NMPC Rebrands as NMSDC
After moving its operations in 1977 from the Chicago to Washington DC, NMPC makes its final move to New York in 1978, establishing a national reach that results in its rebranding in 1981 as the National Minority Supplier Development Council (NMSDC). In the decade that follows, NMSDC discontinues federal funding and becomes a self-supporting organization.

NMSDC Hosts Its first Minority Business Expo
At its annual Conference in Detroit, NMSDC creates the ultimate marketplace for minority business enterprises, the forerunner of the Business Opportunity Exchange – a much-anticipated feature of each annual NMSDC Conference.

During the same decade, NMSDC’s automated supplier database – the Minority Business Information System (MBISYS) – becomes available to members.

NMSDC Partners with Kellogg School of Management

The 1990s also see the establishment of NMSDC’s Corporate Plus® Program and, in 1997, its celebration of 25 transformative years as a changemaker.

NMSDC Purchasing Activity Approaches $1 Trillion
At the end of a busy decade of steady development and growth, NMSDC makes its first moves to spread global awareness of minority supplier development, as its purchasing activity reaches $858.2 billion, prior to the economic downturn in 2008.

A Five-Year Strategic Plan Transforms NMSDC
With new leadership in a time of change – an economic recovery, during the administration of the first African American President – NMSDC modernizes with the reorganization of its affiliate council structure and a global commitment to its mission. The post-2008 economic recovery enables NMSDC’s purchasing power to surpass $1 billion.
